

STATEMENT REGARDING THE CALIFORNIA TRANSPARENCY IN SUPPLY CHAINS ACT OF 2010

Chart supports the right of all individuals to be free from involuntary servitude and human trafficking and we are committed to ensuring our supply chain reflects our respect for human rights. We are guided by our Code of Ethical Business Conduct (the “Code”), which forms the foundation of our core commitment to act with integrity. The Code applies to every director, officer and employee, whether they work for Chart Industries, Inc., or for one of our subsidiaries in the United States or worldwide (together, “we”, “us”, “our”, “Chart” or the “Company”). Our employees agree under the Code to uphold the Company’s values, including honesty, respect, responsibility, fairness and the free exchange of ideas. We are committed to doing business fairly and responsibly and to seeking business partnerships with those who share our commitment to transparent, ethical relationships. We strive to provide all employees with a safe and fair work environment and endeavor to treat one another with respect and dignity, and we expect our suppliers to do the same.

Supplier Performance and Expectations. It is a Company priority to maintain and protect the integrity of our supply chain. When we select any business partner, we consider not only the quality of the goods or services they provide, but also that company’s commitment to lawful, fair business practices. When a supplier signs a Chart purchase order they agree that they operate in compliance with all applicable federal, state and local rules, laws, codes and regulations, including those pertaining to safety, labor and employment. Further, suppliers who sign our purchase orders are obligated to allow us to conduct audits of their performance. Those who violate laws on human trafficking and slavery conduct themselves in a manner inconsistent with our Code, which may ultimately result in their termination as a Chart supplier.

We employ global procurement professionals who understand supply chain risk management and our expectation and commitment to ensuring supply chain integrity. Our procurement officials continue to assess and develop supplier performance expectations, and their own risk management skills, to reduce supply chain risk. While in the future we may find it necessary to implement further controls, at this time we do not believe the risk of involuntary servitude and human trafficking in our supply chain merits formal auditing, verification, or certification directly from our suppliers.

Company Performance and Expectations. Company subsidiaries are expected to operate in full compliance with all federal, state and local laws and regulations where they are located. Our directors, officers and employees worldwide are committed to act with integrity and support the Company values as laid out in the Code, including ongoing reporting obligations. Employees are trained to report to the Company any suspected misconduct. Parties may report concerns anonymously to our dedicated Ethics Representatives, or by calling our Ethics Hotline. We also have in place a Whistleblower Policy to protect those who in good faith report a possible Code violation. Anyone who is found to have violated our Code is subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination of employment.

We believe the foregoing processes, as well as other internal controls inherent to our public company status, are sufficient to alert us to failures by our employees or our suppliers with respect to involuntary servitude and human trafficking.
